

Taking up a leading role as an Architect Training

Take up an advisory role and support the decision-making processes within the company

Learn how to lead as an architect.

Scope management, planning, and control – learn how to help coordinate a change initiative by providing a detailed breakdown of the work and estimations, and managing the external dependencies involved in a project.

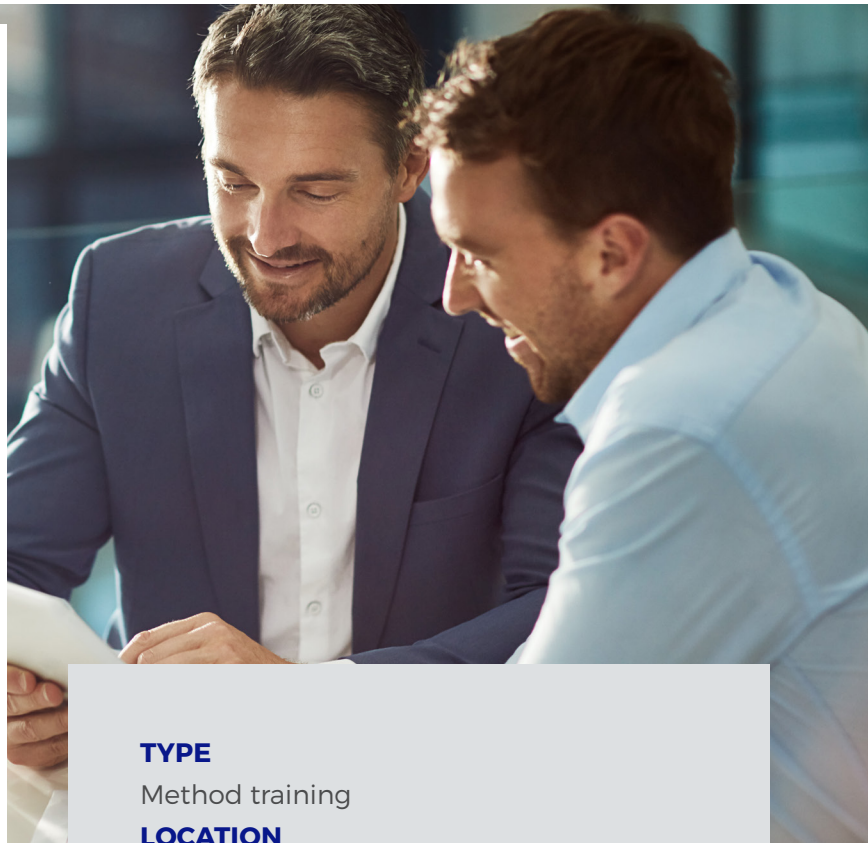

Communications and stakeholder management – create and implement a communications plan to keep stakeholders informed, and learn techniques to maintain productive stakeholder relationships.

Leadership and team development – establish foundations for building, maintaining, managing, and leading a team of architects.

Community building and facilitation – build and maintain connections between architects in a decentralized environment, as a forum for sharing knowledge and identifying bottlenecks.

Every training day starts at 9 AM and ends at 1 PM (Brussels Time). For this training, the self-paced learning period starts two weeks earlier on October 20th. The training days for this course are:
